

Transforming risk – understanding and enhancing safety culture

Prioritising employee wellbeing and cultivating a safe work environment not only improves productivity but also reduces accidents and insurance claims, while enhancing your organisation's reputation.

To assist you, Marsh and Mercer have established a new team focused on enhancing the health and safety culture within your organisation. By combining our expertise, we can now deliver targeted data-driven solutions that effectively help you manage the value of risk.

Our objectives:

Provide a comprehensive survey: We start by conducting an employee survey to identify areas for improvement in your organisation's health and safety culture.

Identify strengths and weaknesses: Our team of experts evaluates the findings and provides a comprehensive report, highlighting concerns at various levels.

Deliver tailored solutions: We work closely with you to develop customised solutions that effectively improve your safety culture. Please note that these tailored solutions are optional extras beyond the basic survey output.

Additionally, we offer risk improvement and consulting support to implement strategies that address the identified concerns and measure their impact on accident and claims rates.

Benefits:

Cost of risk reduction: Our effective risk control measures can help manage your organisation’s insurance costs.	Improved safety performance: By fostering a positive safety culture, we elevate overall safety and risk performance.
Risk management funding: Insurers may offer financial support to clients dedicated to improving health, safety, and risk management within their organisations.	Enhanced brand reputation: Committing to a strong safety culture benefits your employees and enhances your brand’s reputation in the marketplace.
